Sunday Morning Breakfast Talk

By Rev. Elmer Ward Cole

Did you ever study the development of a little babe? You have already seen that every babe that comes into the world comes in at the zero point. He is a bundle of possibilities and nothing more. He has in his nature the germ of a well-developed and as the animal. He has no language but a cry and is truly an infant crying in the night. For the first few weeks he does nothing but sleep. Every cry has a purpose. The good baby is not the one who never cries but the one who grows and whose lungs have come to expand. Strong and healthy babies cry while diseased ones seldom do. Even colic has its purpose in the life of a child. Every movement has a purpose. When the child has grown to be old enough to kick and wave its hands it discovers that it has a body. The smile that comes over the face of the child when it finds that it has a hand and that a foot is very noticeable. A few months pass and then it makes another discovery. This discovery is a very important one in its life—it now finds that it possesses a self, an ego, a personality. Then for the first time the child discovers and he does so simply because he is asserting that self. It is no compliment to the child to say "he never has disobeyed me" etc. It is no honor to be a mere automaton. He has discovered that he has the right to declare himself and proceeds to carry out his own plans. Then begins the battle royal that lasts all the life no matter how long the life may be. For man is a constant rebel against authority. Now comes that hardest task in the whole life—to realize that there is another self in the world that has rights like his own. Some grow up and never learn the lesson. He finds that he must shape his life so that it will conform to the rest of the human race as well as to nature and her laws or he fails. When a man comes to maturity if he studies himself with a degree of intensity he soon finds that he possesses two distinct personalities. Every man has two selves. There is a good man and a bad man in every individual. Robert Louis Stevenson has written a most wonderful story in Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde and has wonderfully illustrated this principle. If you have never read this story do so at an early date for it can be read at a single sitting and is one of the finest pieces of literature ever published. It is not the story of two men but of one man with a dual personality. Dr. Jekyll was a good man, benevolent and kindly and a great physician and chemist. He came to be addicted to the habit of a peculiar drug, and when under its influence was a very bad man, known to the police as Mr. Hyde. The greatest of all arts is the art of the man who is a natural one and, in a modified form, is the story of every man's life. We all have two selves, one a very good self, the other a very bad self. These selves are either very good or very bad in proportion as they are developed. The greatest of all arts is the ability to present the better self only to the world. The development of the better self and the control of the bad self is your supreme business in the world. It is the most difficult of tasks but it is well worth the while. I am constantly reminded that the natural boy has a great everlasting position to experiment with all the world and its sins as well as its virtues. He wants to experiment with his lower self, to see what he can do with it and how the world will take it. His tremendous content is characteristic of youth, it makes him certain of himself, he thinks that he can easily come back to the natural self, to the good self, and so he continues the experiment until he learns one day that he cannot return, the bad self is in control and rules with a rod of iron. He is no longer master but is a slave. This and only this is total depravity. Men are not born totally depraved but make themselves thus. Man is naturally good. The Dr. Jekyll is the natural man. Far too many of our young men and women in the world today are hating their best selves for a mass of postage. When it is too late they try to blame Fate, Heredity and a dozen other Gods which in their cases never existed. No, you must keep the mastery of your better self and keep it constantly in control for when it is once lost it seldom can be regained. Habits become hard and fast. Now is the time to act. Make the best ideals of life its controlling principle and then and only then are you safe.

WESLEYAN METHODIST

Dedicate New Parish Chapel Today

Plans have been completed for the services at 10 o'clock this morning which will mark the dedication of St. Matthews chapel, in the South Side of the city. High mass will be read at that hour. The chapel, a temporary structure built by the Catholics of that new parish, will be replaced within a few years by a cathedral. Schools and other parish buildings will be constructed on the site. The News-Times photographer gives you an exterior view of the chapel, and an interior view, showing the altar.

CENTENARIANS TO BE COMMON THING

Children of Today Are Finer Than Those of Previous Years, Doctor Says.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—(By I. N. S.)—Centenarians will be commonplace in the next generation, for the children of today are far better and finer than the children of pre-war days, according to Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin, American child specialist, whose work is attracting considerable attention in London. "I don't see why every ordinary person should not live to be a centenarian," Dr. Chapin said. "If we give babies the right start, hundredth birthdays in the next generation will not be the sensation they are today. "Scientists have discovered that the lower animals live five times the period it takes for their bones to develop. "It takes human beings twenty years for full bone growth, and on this natural basis the average healthy life should be about 100 years. "The reason so few people live a century is principally because of the social environment of the first five years of their lives. Those are the most important years. "Heredity is blamed for a good

Gas and Moonshine Do Not Mix—Man Convicted

CINCINNATI, Aug. 12.—(By I. N. S.)—Bootleggers' experiments to the contrary, whisky and gasoline don't mix in Cincinnati, and because of this Clifford Harvey paid $50 and costs and is spending a month's vacation in the workhouse. Judge Yeaman not only imposed this sentence in Police Court, but also suspended Harvey's right to drive a car for three months when he was arraigned on a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated. "Not one-half of our reserved energy is used by the greatest workers. There is no such thing as physical overwork."

OSTRICH FRINGE

The sash of one of the newest Paris importations in the way of a dinner gown is trimmed with ostrich fringes shading from orange into deep brown. It is worn with a brown silk frock.

IN SILVER

Silver embroidery is seen on some of the most lovely wifroccks. White wool embroidery on black fabrics is also very popular.

NEWEST COIFFURE

The newest coiffure is striking rather than becoming. It completely uncovers the ear and adds some curls, plastered down flat in the Spanish fashion. All the hair is gathered into a knot at the nape of the neck and a huge Spanish comb added.

HOME BUILDING

Is a Matter of Determination

IF EVERY one only knew that homebuilding is largely a matter of determination — of getting started—there would be much more building and happiness instead of so much indecision and purposeless fretting.

In most cases homebuilding is looked upon as a tremendous undertaking—something extremely difficult. Perhaps it is for those who struggle along without sound building advice or help. But whoever wants to make homebuilding easy can do so by letting experienced building men help with his problems.

For 46 years we have been engaged in the building business in South Bend. We understand conditions here thoroughly. It is only natural, then, that we should see the easy way to solve the problems which trouble you.

Drop in and talk it over—without obligation. The chances are that we can offer you many valuable suggestions just as we have hundreds of other people. As a starter, suppose you look through our many plan books. The plan of the home pictured above is included.
